

SEO using Google Maps

SearchForecast suggest clients use Google Maps to increase natural search engine indexation. The rationale is that Google will most likely index pages that contain their Google Sitemaps compared to other competitor website pages which do not, assuming all other web page elements are equal.

What are Google Maps?

Google has released an Application Programming Interface (API) for website developers to integrate Google maps into web pages. This API allows web developers to create an administration where non-technical persons can browse the map using the zoom in and zoom out functions to select a location. This user-friendly navigation automatically generates the geographical coordinates of the location, rendering the map in real time in the users Internet browser.
